he pressed his efforts to a final conclusion on a personal basis."

Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, House Democratic whip, said: "It looks to me like the isolationists won the election in Wisconsin, and that means the Republican party out there is the isolationist party."

Senator Thomas A. Republican Idaho, said the Wisconsin vote for Dewey "reflects sentiment in the far west." It shows, he said, that "the demand for Dewey's services as President is deep in the hearts of the people and not the result of organized effort."

Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont: "Many of the views which Mr. Willkie has advanced I have held for years. I hope there will be someone who will come into the field to take up the torch and carry it forward."

Senator Butler, of Nebraska, member of the GOP senatorial campaign committee:

"I am not surprised at this. In my own mind I felt certain of the feeling in the country and in a statement last September I said that the people of Nebraska did not want him (Willkie) to be selected as the nominee."

"I hope that he will now be found lining up with and lending

Mercury To Dip to 28; Georgia Crops in Danger

Freezing temperatures, which sent snow into many eastern states yesterday, were scheduled today to follow three weeks of heavy rain in Georgia, creating a further hazard to vegetables and peach production in this state.

Low temperatures ranging from 25 to 32 were predicted for the Atlanta area and north Georgia this morning. The weather bureau sees warmer weather over Georgia during the afternoon, however.

Georgia's commercial truck crops were damaged by heavy rains and floods in many parts of the state and the anticipated freeze and frost may further injure vegetables and curtail the northern Georgia peach crop, weather and crop services said.

SNOW COVERS EAST

Heavy snowstorms were reported in at least six eastern states. Down in Miami, girls swapped bathing suits for sweaters, and men turned up their collars as the temperature dropped to a record low of 47 degrees for this time of year.

Snow fell in New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and West Virginia. In New York city, the storm was preceded by thunder, and in West Virginia, it was accompanied by sleet. In the first few hours, New York city reported three and one-half inches of snow—the heaviest on record for that date. Up to six inches were recorded in New York state.

Damage to peach crops was feared in Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Maryland and West Virginia because of the abnormally cold weather and heavy frost in some sections.

GEORGIA CROP PICTURE

Low records for this time of year were reported in Birmingham, with 30 degrees; Memphis, with 29, and Richmond, with 30.8.

HOUSE, AFTER NIGHT OF DEBATE, DECLARES U. S. IN STATE OF WAR

Government Asks Army of 2,000,000

373 VOTES ARE CAST IN FAVOR OF MEASURE; 50 VOTED AGAINST IT

President Wilson Will Sign Resolution Today.

HOW ARMY DAY BEGAN—It was 27 years ago today when these headlines in The Constitution shocked—but did not surprise—Atlanta people into the realization that a war was on. The gods of war have developed their lethal technique to a finer point of dealness since then; men and materiel are needed in vaster quantities today than in that other war—but the impact of that news still makes memories surge. So keenly is that date remembered, in fact, that it has been chosen, in the intervening years, as the official day for commemoration of Army Day. General Frederick E. Uhl will be principal speaker today at ceremonies here honoring the anniversary.

General Uhl To Be Speaker At Celebration of Army Day

By PAUL WARWICK.

Proper gratitude and admiration for our armed forces will be expressed today as Atlanta celebrates Army Day just 27 years after congress declared a state of hostilities against Germany in the first World War.

Major General Frederick E. Uhl, a veteran of the other war, now commanding general of the Fourth Service Command with headquarters here, will be principal speaker at formal Army Day ceremonies at 12:30 p. m. today in the combined Civic and Dinkler rooms of the Ansley hotel.

Brigadier General Clark Howell, adjutant general of the state of Georgia, will introduce General Uhl to the meeting, which will take place under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in co-operation with the Military Order of the World War.

When war was declared against Germany April 6, 1917—a date subsequently chosen for annual commemoration of Army Day—Atlanta was shocked, but perhaps not surprised, in a manner which was to be repeated more than 24 years later in news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Added interest in the day centered about the presence in Atlanta of Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, daughter of Woodrow Wilson—the nation's president of World War I—and widow of the late Senator William Gibbs McAdoo. Mrs. McAdoo's visit to Atlanta is for the purpose of meeting with leaders of the women's division of the War Finance Committee in the interest of War Bond sales.

The late president's daughter will be the guest of Charles J. Currie, chairman of the 16th treasury district of the War Finance Committee, and his sister, Mrs. Nancy Currie Robinson, supervisor of women's War Bond activities in the southeast—a position similar to that held by Mrs. McAdoo on the west coast. Mrs. McAdoo will be entertained today at a luncheon at the Capital City Club.

Jones, Texas financier and publisher, was born April 5, 1874, in Robertson county, Tennessee.

VeteranPrinter Critically Ill

Herman A. Agricola, 72, pioneer Atlanta printer and one of the oldest Constitution employees from point of continuous service, is in a critical condition at St. Joseph's infirmary following a cerebral hemorrhage a week ago.

A native of Atlanta, Agricola came to work on The Constitution 52 years ago as a mail clerk. He later transferred to the composing room where he served as a printer's devil, becoming a full-fledged printer.

The veteran printer saw the publishing business revolutionized by the invention of the linotype, a development which he hailed as second only to the common usage of typewriters in the newsroom. Agricola deciphered the handwriting of such famous personages as Henry W. Grady, Joel Chandler Harris and Frank L. Stanton in the pretypewriter days.

Active until the day he was stricken, Agricola was known by his fellow workers as one of the fastest and most accurate operators on the floor. He and Mrs. Agricola live at the Frances hotel, 343 Peachtree. They have two daughters, Mrs. L. J. Linene and Mrs. W. J. Hartrampf, both of Atlanta.

Killed in Action

Tokyo Raider Lost Overseas

The name of Captain Denver V. Truelove, brown-eyed, slow-talking, north Georgia farm boy who came back from that historic Doolittle raid over Tokyo in the spring of 1942 to spend his leave serving troops for Uncle Sam, yes, Texas was added to the War Department's casualty list.

He was killed in action in the Mediterranean area, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde W. Truelove, formerly of Lula, now living at Atlanta, were notified.

Captain Truelove, who came back from the Shanghai-La raid, on which he served as bombardier, with the rank of second lieutenant and won the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Military Order of China Medal for his part in the raid. ## 26-Cent 'Floor' Planned To Support Egg Prices

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—Midwestern senators, flooded with protests from back home against low egg prices, today heard with hope but with some reservations a War Food Administration plan to support farm prices in the face of a market glut.

The program, outlined to an informal conference of senators by WFA Administrator Marvin Jones, would place a floor of 26 cents under ungraded current receipts by requiring handlers at concentration points to certify that they had paid that minimum before they could receive WFA support prices, currently varying from 27 to 32 cents.

Senators in the conference generally indicated their belief that Congress would support Jones in his request for authority to dispose of perishable commodities at a loss to prevent their going to waste.

Jones told the group he was afraid the WFA was "going to have a lot of stuff rot on our hands" unless relieved of the present requirements that commodities cannot be sold at less than parity prices unless they have begun to deteriorate.

Penicillin Enough for 250,000 Music Clubs Serious Cases a Month Is Near

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE.
Associated Press Science Editor.
CLEVELAND, April 5.—Soon 21 new penicillin manufacturing plants in the United States and Canada, costing $20,000,000, will be making nine pounds of pure penicillin a month.

Enough perhaps for the military forces, but not enough for a date to be set when this life-saving drug can be given to the public without restriction.

The penicillin developments were reported to the American Chemical Society today by Dr. Robert G. Coghill, of the United States Department of Agriculture at Peoria, Ill., where much of the penicillin work has been done.

WHAT IT WILL DO
The nine pounds will treat only 250,000 cases of severe illness, but will do for 2,500,000 cases of gonorrhea or other comparatively mild infections—mild, that is, when penicillin is the remedy. The cost of making penicillin has dropped 84 per cent in the past year, so that the dosage for a severe illness costs about $35, and for gonorrhea $5.

"However," said Dr. Coghill, "the price will undoubtedly go much lower, and penicillin will be within reach of everybody."

ALTERNATE FOR SULFA
He named the diseases for which penicillin is good and all but one are the same as those where sulfa drugs are good. The exception is syphilis, which Dr. Coghill put in the "possible" class.

There are now three methods of growing penicillin where there was only one a year ago. By one of these it can be grown in vats instead of bottles. Nevertheless, Dr. Coghill said, only nine pounds a month from $20,000,000 worth of plants is "utterly fantastic."

Methods of producing it faster are not now in sight, but are expected. Penicillin production today is enough for 40,000 severe cases a month. One year ago it was only enough for 400.

Dailey Case Nears Jury

The case in federal court here against Police Chief Joseph T. Dailey and three other DeKalb county police officers charged with civil liberties violations is expected to reach a jury today following rebuttals by defense and government counsel.

Rebuttals are expected today following testimony yesterday by the four defendants who pleaded innocence and testified they had not beaten or maltreated any arrested persons or prisoners in De-Kalb county.

Chief Dailey, Lieutenant Ben Hensler and Patrolmen Charles L.
Visscher and Jefferson C. Holbrook Jr. are charged with beating Naomi Reid and Raymond Rouser, Negroes, to obtain their confession to burglarizing the Ritz Supper Club last October.

Chief Dailey was the first defendant on the stand and testified that at no time did he beat either of the Negroes, nor did any of his staff beat them to his knowledge.

On cross-examination by District Attorney M. Neil Andrews,
Chief Dailey testified that Naomi Reid told him three stories about "beatings she received." He said the Reid woman first said Rouser beat her to force her to burglarize the supper club. She later said she got in a fight with another woman over her "boy friend," and again changed the story to one about a white man beating her, Dailey testified.

He said he saw a bruise on the Reid woman's face and a cut on her wrist as the only evidence of alleged beating.

Police Lieutenant Hensler and Patrolmen Visscher and Holbrook followed Dailey on the stand and corroborated his testimony. All three denied having beaten the alleged victims or any other prisoner or person.

Willkie
sixth ballot, aided, many said, by a flood of telegrams inspired by Willkie-backers and by whooping hollering galleries, Willkie won the nomination.

Beaten by Franklin D. Roosevelt in November, Willkie promptly cranked up another campaign pointed toward 1944—the campaign that was ended tonight by his own words of retirement, the campaign that came a cropper in a Wisconsin election to take but which took Willkie instead.

"It has been my conviction," Willkie said here tonight, "that no Republican could be nominated for President unless he received at the convention the votes of some of the major midwestern states. For it is in this section of the country that the Republican party has had its greatest resurgence."

"Therefore I quite deliberately entered the Wisconsin primary to test whether the Republican voters of the state would support me and in the advocacy of every sacrifice and cost necessary to winning and shortening the war, and in the advocacy of tangible, effective economic and political cooperation among the nations of the world for the preservation of the peace and the rebuilding of humanity."

"The result of the primary is that I am not a Republican."

Willkie's speech was the last in a five-day campaign tour of Nebraska for votes in the April 11
presidential, preferential primary,
in which he is opposed by Harold Stassen, former Minnesota governor.

CITES "UNCERTAINTY"
Willkie said he had two principal charges to lodge against the administration in regard to foreign policy.

The first, he said, was that the administration "has confused the political and military conduct of the war to an extent where uncertainty has taken the place of assurance, delay of action. This means prolonging the war, and wasting lives."

His second charge, he added, is that the administration "is not being square with the American people and is promoting confusion, cynicism and distrust among us."

Willkie asserted that the administration has "committed us to unknown policies, worked out by

Italian King To Yield Throne; Powers Will Go To Umberto

By RICHARD B. WASSOCK.
NAPLES, April 5.—(AP)—Crown Prince Umberto said tonight
he was prepared to act as deputy for his father, King Vittorio Emanuele, as king, thereby clearing the way for a coalition war government of all the major political parties.
In a 30-minute audience Umberto, Prince of Piedmont, confirmed reports of the King's proposal a fortnight ago to hand over his powers to his son as his lieutenant.
"The King is old and ready to retire," the Prince said. "He has had a full life."

Had he had intended to retire when the Allied armies reached Rome and appoint him as his lieutenant to exercise the prerogatives of the crown, Umberto said. Whether the King might act sooner he was unable to say.

The King's pledge to withdraw from public life, however, was of the highest importance since the leaders of the six opposition parties have indicated that it would remove a major obstacle to their collaboration with the government of Premier Badoglio.

The six parties meet tomorrow to decide whether they shall join in a Communist proposal to form "a new government" of all the anti-Fascist elements. While some have been holding out against Badoglio there was a majority tendency tonight to accept him as premier and minister of national defense if assurances are given of the King's retirement and the final settlement of the monarchical question after the war.

The Prince declined to discuss partisan politics, in keeping with the royal tradition.

The tall heir to the Italian throne looked youthful and handsome, although his hair is thinning, when he received me with gracious informality in the drawing room of his seaside villa.

We talked alone, first about mutual friends in Rome before the war and of the last time I had seen him at the wedding of his youngest sister, Maria, to Prince Louis, of Bourbon-Parma, brother of the former Princess Zita, of Austria.

He informed me the Germans had taken Maria from Florence, where she lived with Prince Louis, to Silesia as a hostage.

naturally disappointing and doubly so since the delegate who led the poll for delegates is known as one active in organizations such as the American First, opposed to the beliefs which I entertain . . .

Then Willkie admitted he now knew he could not be nominated —and he quit.

Not did he in quitting, commit himself to support the Republican nominee—whichever he may be—although "earnestly" expressing the hope that the Republican convention will nominate "a candidate and write a platform which really represents the views which I have advocated."

Thus Willkie remains a question mark, despite his insistence on brushing off inquiries from those who have sought to obtain his own declaration as to whether he will support whomever the party may name.

The story of what happened to the following of Wendell Willkie from the time he captured the 1940 convention up to his retirement tonight must await some future unfolding.

Against Roosevelt's 27,243,466
in 1940, Willkie polled a popular vote of 22,304,755. It was a record. Herbert Hoover had received the previous record of 22,392,190
in 1928.

DEWEY'S STRENGTH GROWS
But for months, newspaper reporters and others who make it their business to try to know what's going on have been asking the question among themselves:
Few attempted a positive explanation.

But none denied that where there was Willkie political strength in 1940 they were finding increasing Dewey strength in 1944—and a rallying also to Bricker and others.

Some politicians thought it might have been the nature of Willkie's attack—his dogged determination to get his views before the people, his fighting for an idea to which he had become committed.

Certainly there was an unmeasured amount of resistance in Wisconsin to Willkie's very aggressiveness, at least among those opposed to views.

Said Fred Zimmerman, Wisconsin secretary of state and leader of the Dewey forces there:
"Wisconsin would not be blitzed like the Republican convention of 1940 was blitzed at Philadelphia."

Zimmerman should know his politics. He has led the Wisconsin Republican ticket in this and six other elections.

Simultaneously Willkie's managers announced that he is cancelling future campaign trips, including a speech at Sioux City, Iowa, tomorrow night, and a visit to Michigan. He will return to New York after his speech tonight.

Willkie's voice went on tonight
at Omaha:
"As I have said many times, this country desperately needs new leadership. It is obvious now that I cannot be nominated. I therefore am asking my friends to desert
from any activity toward that end and not to present my name at the convention."

"I earnestly hope that the Republican convention will nominate a candidate and write a platform which really represents the views which I have advocated and which I believe are shared by millions of Americans. I shall continue to work for these principles and policies for which I have fought during the last five years."

Willkie, in his address, accused the administration of pursuing a foreign policy that "is causing delay and uncertainty in prosecution of the war and promoting 'confusion, cynicism and distrust' on the home front."

Willkie's speech was the last in
a five-day campaign tour of Nebraska for votes in the April 11
presidential, preferential primary,
in which he is opposed by Harold

Chaplin Faces A Second Trial

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—Pay Charles Chaplin acquitted by a federal jury last night of two counts of Mann act violation which grew out of a trip to New York by Joan Berry, faces a second trial arising from his association with the girl who was charged with a Mann act violation.

The man who unsuccessfully prosecuted the Mann act charges, U. S. Attorney Charles H. Carr, was emphatic today in his declaration that Chaplin will go to trial on charges of conspiracy to deprive Miss Berry of her civil rights. Carr made this statement just before leaving by air to visit his mother, ill in Memphis, Tenn.

Joan was arrested last year on a vagrancy warrant in Beverly Hills, where Chaplin lives. The federal government alleges that her sentence was suspended on condition that she leave that city.

Three Mann act prosecutions among them—reached their verdict after five hours' consideration. Chaplin, overcome with emotion, gasped, "I believe in American justice."

When Miss Berry, Carr's main witness, was told of the verdict she obviously was disappointed. "If the jury believed Mr. Chaplin that as their business," she said.

The principal point of contention in the trial was whether Joan and Chaplin, who paid her way to New York, had relations there. Carr insisted they did, Chaplin insisted they didn't.

Carr said today that the Mann act charge was incidental to the main charge, which is still pending, and had no connection with those charges.

Arguments on demurrers to the Mann act charges and other technical legal motions are set for next Tuesday and if the position of the government is sustained by the courts, we will proceed to trial on those indictments.

Forty-nine purebred Jersey cattle, recently purchased to restock the Tattall state prison farm, were obtained from 20 different breeders over the state. State Purchasing Agent W. E. Pate has announced. Total cost was $23,362.

Easter Parade To Show Off Prewar Shopping This Year

By CELESTINE SIBLEY.
The military motif may have dubs on every other phase of American life but Easter, a sneak week-day preview indicates, is going to be practically prewar stuff.

As in other years, Atlanta women are answering the question, "Shall we dress?" by penciling a shopping list and hurrying to town by the thousands to get ready for the Easter parade. The same throngs, visions of sugar plum hats dancing in their heads, are surging through revolving doors and up and down elevators and with but a few exceptions, the Easter picture looks the same.

Stained glass windows . . . radiant choir boys . . . flop-eared bunnies in pastel hues . . . little girls in petal-like frocks . . . their mammas and big sisters in hats that satisfy wearer and critic alike with a new high in zinniness.

EASTER IS DIFFERENT
But the exceptions are there and they are enough to remind even the most engrossed shopper that, appearances to the contrary, Easter this year will be different.

For one thing, there is a strange lack of activity in the men's wear departments. Comparatively few new suits are being sold and even the necktie department, usually included in the itinerary of women shoppers, has fallen on quieter days.

An aging haberdashery salesman with time enough on his hands to chat and admire a sun-burst effect in a blue and gold cravat, thought he had the explanation.

"They tell me most of our customers are letting Uncle Sam choose their ties this year," he observed. "Of course, his taste is ultra-conservative—I might even pre-April boom due to the new taxes.

"On the whole," one department store executive remarked, looking out over a floor of jammed aisles, "I would say that the people at home are doing their best to keep up a brave front."

The change that really hits the younger generation where it lives is in the Easter bunny department—no more chocolate eggs! Those luscious nut and fruit filled jobs that came complete with Junior and Sister's names spelled out in pink and white icing have apparently gone to war—along with the bright-colored marshmallow eggs that in other years filled the bottom of the basket and usually tasted faintly of shredded paper.

JELLY BEANS BACK
Jelly beans have come valiantly to the fore, however, and only the more nostalgic small fry will know the difference. One resourceful department store rushed old-fashioned spun sugar eggs with icing glass peep holes forward to fill the gap. Gay Nineties confections that are inedible but entertaining long after the Sunday afternoon Easter egg hunt is over.

Flowers for gifts and decorations are scarcer this year than usual—due to the fickleness of weather in sections where such things as violets and roses are produced in quantities and the absence of usual bulb importations from Holland and the orient. One wholesale florist reported that his entire stock was sold out last week and predicted that many young women who usually wear a fragrant corsage in the Easter parade will make out with artificial posies this year.

But by and large Easter preparations follow the same pattern of other years. Sales of women's and children's clothing are flourishing and such departments as cosmetics and jewelry enjoyed a

Georgia Girl's Kin Sentenced Under Mann Act

CHICAGO, April 5.—(AP)—John George Gaffis, 29, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and his wife, Theodora, 25, was placed on probation for two years in federal court today for violating the Mann white slave act.

On March 14 both were convicted of taking Mrs. Gaffis' sister, Winnie Mae Murphy, 16, from an Atlanta orphanage to Chicago and forcing her into prostitution.

Denying a new trial, Judge Michael L. Kane declared "this is the most depraved situation that one can ever encounter even in the city of Chicago." He added that Mrs. Gaffis and her sister "came from wretched homes situated in a most backward part of our country—the hills of Georgia"—had only a semblance of home life and spent their early years in an orphanage.

"I am unable to believe that Theodora, who is a mother, could so wantonly force her sister into a life of shame," the judge said. He told defense counsel that Gaffis never held a "decent" job and that of several employments Gaffis claimed one was that of house.

disclosed today after a study of aerial photographs.

Considerable damage was inflicted on the main Bucharest railway yards, the Allied spokesman said, despite the desperate efforts of 200 German fighter planes to intercept and divert the bombers, who flew over 400 miles from southern Italy to deliver the first American blow at the Rumanian capital.

Reports indicated that bomber planes destroyed at least 36 enemy planes in a sky fight that lasted over an hour, while escorting Lightning and Thunderbolt fighters claimed three more. The Allied Mediterranean air force lost 12 planes during the day, some of them on the Bucharest mission.

A line of bombs that hit squarely in the Bucharest rail yards was held to have destroyed 80 freight cars. A roundhouse was partly destroyed and two were left blazing in a 1400-foot block of warehouses.

Ground fighting in Italy remained of a minor character. Italian troops of the Allied Fifth Army, who occupied Mt. Marone north of Cassino a few days ago, inflicted casualties on a Nazi force that attempted to retake the height yesterday.

Two more German shells fell in an Allied hospital area on the Anzio beachhead on Monday, causing another death.

Rumania May Seek Armistice, Turks Say

By WES GALLAGHER
LONDON, April 5.—(AP)—Rumania's days as an effective fighting power appear ended under the onslaught of Russian armies and Allied bombers.

Premier Ion Antonescu, it is believed here, is finding it impossible to take Rumania formally out of the war since German troops hold all key points, but the people's will to fight is broken and Rumania now is in the same apathetic state as Italy.

A Blue Network broadcast from London quoted Turkish dispatches as saying Antonescu would ask Moscow, Washington and London for an armistice.

Although Hitler's Balkan satellites are disintegrating under the burden of war, Allied military chiefs preparing the western front have small hope that a Balkan collapse would be of any immediate serious injury to the German war machine.

The Russians have advanced roughly 100 miles recently on a 400-mile front. Even if they are able to continue their rapid pace, it would take them two months to reach the Ploesti oil fields.

These fields are the richest economic prize in southeastern Europe, and their loss would be a severe blow to Germany, which uses more than half of Ploesti's 3,500,000-ton yearly output. Military men, however, say it would be some time before this loss makes itself felt, since Germany is known to have reserve oil stocks for several months' supply.

The Russian advance has for the first time in this war placed Allied fighting arms in direct contact with the Russian army, as Allied bombers in Italy demonstrated they were capable of aiding the Red army ground force operations by hitting Nazi communications at Budapest and Bucharest which feed the eastern front.

Thomas

tries will return to their homes. They are working today for patriotic reasons. That is, they have husbands or sons or brothers in the service, and they want to be on the fighting home front.

WOMEN TO GO HOME

"When the war is over, this motive will no longer apply. I think those women will go home, and not remain at industrial jobs. Now, take the matter of many small businesses. Many of them have been forced to close their doors because personnel has gone into the service. These men, too, I believe, will go back to their peacetime pursuits.

"Then there are the men in the older age brackets who are now working in war industries. They are actuated by patriotism; the desire to help on the home front. These men will go back to their retirement or their peacetime jobs. In short, I do not envision serious, violent dislocation or disruption in industrial employment.

"And we must always keep in mind the tremendous vacuum that the war has created for civilian goods. These will be manufactured. This means work for the returning soldier, and an easier return to peacetime ways and peacetime prosperity.

RICH IN COMFORTS

"I can see only one big thing—the United States as the greatest nation on the face of the globe. We will be wealthy beyond anything we have seen so far. I don't mean in money. I mean in the comforts, the things people will have, the opportunities, the new things we will be able to develop.

"The war has given great impetus to originality. The engineer and the chemist are coming into their own. The next decade will really make our eyes open."

Commenting on the present production of synthetic rubber, Thomas said that the overall picture discloses the heartening fact this country will produce 800,000 tons by the end of this year.

"This compares with the all-time peacetime high of 650,000 tons of natural rubber used in 1941. It is a heartening prospect," he said.

As an example of postwar comforts due to present developments in rubber under pressure of the war, Thomas cited the foam latex mattress, the material for which is of such utility that "you can sleep on that mattress for your entire life."

Thomas was shown through the Atlanta plant, which employs 2,000 persons, by Robert L. Fish, plant manager. He has been chairman of the board since November, 1941. He started with the company as a chemist, and has served through such offices as general superintendent of plants, director, vice president and president to his present post.

He remained overnight at the Ansley hotel, and was due to leave by plane this morning for Gas Tonia, S. C., for inspection of a cotton plant.

Monday Raid Blasted Tirpitz Her Full Length

LONDON, April 5.—(P.)—Disclosing details of Monday's aerial bombardment of the German battleship Tirpitz, the Admiralty said tonight that two waves of carrier-based planes attacked the 35,000-ton giant in her Norwegian hideaway as she was about to cast anchor, hit her along nearly her full length with heavy and medium bombs and shelled her antiaircraft guns.

Prime Minister Churchill hailed the attack as a "most brilliant feat of arms so serviceable to the Royal Navy and the whole world cause."

The admiralty communique said: "Of all the aircraft which took part in this successful operation, three Barracudas and one fighter were lost."

Toward dawn Monday, it related, aircraft carriers and other units of the home fleet approached the vicinity of Alten Fjord, Norway.

"Two forces of Barracuda aircraft were flown from carriers to attack, with escort and cover provided by Seafire, Corsair, Hellcat and Wildcat fighters."

"The first strike caught the Tirpitz apparently as she was about to move from her anchorage. Hits were obtained near the bridge, amidships and forward of the bridge with heavy and medium size bombs."

"The enemy endeavored to screen the Tirpitz by smoke but nonetheless further hits were obtained during a second attack in the vicinity of the after turret, amidships and on the forecastle."

"Antiaircraft fire from the Tirpitz, and from shore batteries was encountered during the attack but by the time the last aircraft attacked the battleship had been silenced."

"When last seen the Tirpitz was on fire amidships."

his great energy and powers to the success of the Republican party. I have been in favor of Governor Bricker (of Ohio) and still am, but I intend to support the nominee of the party whoever he may be. I believe Bricker and Dewey will divide whatever support Mr. Wilkie had, and I'm convinced the Republican nominee is going to be the next president."

Senator Danaher, Republican, Connecticut—"That Mr. Wilkie has arrived at his decision advisedly would seem to be indicated by the facts. I hope that the Republican party will nominate a candidate from the number of excellent men available who will lead the party to victory."

Senator Bushfield, Republican, South Dakota, expressed surprise. He called Wilkie's announcement "a pretty good statement."

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, refrained from comment, since it's a matter "outside my party," Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, a supporter of General MacArthur, had no comment at this time.

"Mr. Wilkie has apparently recognized the inevitable," said Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio. "It is unfortunate that he allowed his natural disappointment to lead him to attack Republicans who disagree with him on foreign policy. Nevertheless, his withdrawal will produce a greater unity of all Republicans behind the principles declared at Mackinac."

Taft's reference apparently was to the passage in Wilkie's speech saying it was "doubly" disappointing to him that the delegate who led at the polls is "known as one active in organizations such as the America First, opposed to the principles which I entertain."

Wisconsin's secretary of state, Fred R. Zimmerman, head of the Dewey delegate slate, was the leading vote getter.

Representative Fish, Republican, New York, said Wilkie's withdrawal "is an unselfish and patriotic act to promote the unity and success of the Republican party and help in the defeat of the New Deal, the fourth term, and the Washington bureaucrats."

SAYS WILKIE "RIGHT"
Senator Revercomb, Republican, West Virginia, commented: "Mr. Wilkie apparently feels for his own reasons that upon the return from Wisconsin he cannot be the candidate of the Republican party. If he feels that way he is right in withdrawing from the race. The Republican party will, I believe, and I certainly hope, nominate a strong ticket that will appeal to the American people."

Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, said Wilkie's withdrawal "greatly simplifies the task confronting Republicans this year."

He commented that "the leading candidate... seems to be representative of far more millions of Americans than is Mr. Wilkie."

Senator White, Republican, Maine, acting senate minority leader, wouldn't discuss the implications of the Wilkie withdrawal, but said "I always have had great respect for him" and added: "He probably is adopting a wise course in view of the result in Wisconsin."

Senator Ball, Republican, Minnesota—"I have always admired Wendell Wilkie's courage and candor. They were never better exemplified than in the statement he has just issued. It is my deep conviction that unless the Republican party takes a forthright and courageous position on domestic and international issues and nominates a candidate who can carry this sort of program to the people, we are failing in our responsibility to America. That is why I have campaigned so strenuously for Harold Stassen, and for the fundamental principles for which he stands, and that is why I shall continue to devote all the energy I can spare to campaign for Stassen and for those principles."

Capt. Van Lear Awarded DFC

The Constitution's Marietta News Bureau
MARIETTA, Ga., April 5.—"For extraordinary achievement" as pilot of an Army bomber on the North African battlefield, Captain Harry P. Van Lear, commander of the Marietta Army Air Base, today received the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Lieutenant General Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, personally pinned the medal on Captain Van Lear. Accompanied by Major Van Cotts, his aide, General Somervell arrived at the Air Base in a C-47 at 5:15 p. m.

The citation reads: "For extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight in North Africa as pilot of a B-26 throughout the Tunisian and the Italian campaigns, Captain Van Lear, by his expert leadership and calm judgment in combat, has set an example of high achievement for members of his squadron."

"En route to a seaplane mission on June 3, 1943, the cockpit and control surfaces of his plane were severely damaged by anti-aircraft fire from a gun emplacement near Pont du Fahs. Unable to continue his mission, he selected a vital railway line north of Enfidaville as a target of opportunity."

"With most of his instruments destroyed, he displayed outstanding flying skill in scoring many direct hits upon the railroad and in maintaining altitude long enough to clear the mountain ranges that stood between the target and friendly territory. He expertly crash-landed at his base without injury to his crew. His professional skill and outstanding courage reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army Air Forces."

When General Somervell's plane landed in Marietta, Captain Van Lear's command was drawn up on the field in U formation. Somervell's plane landed in the mouth of the "U." Major Van Cotts read the citation and General Somervell decorated Van Lear with the medal.

Captain Van Lear, a native of Lynchburg, Va., became commander of the air base here four and one-half months ago.

A large group of citizens, including Mrs. Van Lear, witnessed the ceremony.

damental principles for which he stands, and that is why I shall continue to devote all the energy I can spare to campaign for Stassen and for those principles."

ON OREGON TICKET
Wilkie had not succeeded in obtaining a single pledged delegate among those selected to date. His supporters, however, claimed a minimum of 10, including six in New Hampshire, one in New Mexico and at least three in New York. These claimed delegates, being unpledged, are of course free to vote for any other man they choose.

Wilkie also was scheduled definitely to obtain Oregon's 15 votes, since he was the only candidate entered for the May 19 primary. A total of 23 delegates selected thus far are pledged to Dewey, and his backers claim the support of 109 others, for a grand total of 132. It takes 530 to obtain the nomination.

The comment by Fred R. Zimmerman, leader of the Dewey-pledged Wisconsin slate, that the vote showed Dewey "already has been drafted" was echoed privately by many party men here, but others were inclined to adopt a "wait and see" attitude before counting him in.

164 DEMOCRATS ELECTED
Should the final returns show him as winning 18 of Wisconsin's 24 delegates Dewey will have gained 132 pledged and claims delegates of the 276 so far chosen, including two uninstructed, but favorable to him, picked in an Oklahoma district convention today; 82 in New York, at least 20 in North Carolina, eight in Missouri, and two in New Hampshire.

With 26 pro-Roosevelt delegates apparently elected in Wisconsin, the Democrats have now chosen 164, with 32 pledged and claimed for a fourth term nomination.

Pre-Pearl Harbor opponents of administration foreign policy in both parties took heart from the voting. Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, said he was not surprised and added it "ought to convince the internationalists what the people think of some of their screwy ideas."

Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, said the results "quite completely eliminate Wilkie as a contender for the nomination and give Dewey the inside track, with the possibility he may win on the first ballot."

Even Stassen leaders, like Senator Reed, Republican, Kansas, said it was a "hard jolt for Wilkie."

WILKIE REPUDIATION
Representative Michener, Republican, commented that aside from the effects on the fortunes of individuals involved, the balloting proved something definite about politics—that wartime is no time for "barnstorming" campaigns.

Representative Wilson, Republican, Indiana, declared: "No one except the narrowest and most prejudiced politician could interpret the outcome of the Wisconsin primary as being anything other than outright repudiation of Wendell Wilkie and most everything that he stands for, which, in my opinion, is equivalent to repudiation of the New Deal itself and it's No. 1 'me too' Republican who has contended that he could do a better job of running the New Deal than the New Deal's own godfather..."

Laws To End Strike of 110,000 Drafted by British Cabinet

LONDON, Thursday, April 6.—(P)—The British war cabinet early today drafted an urgent order specifying that incitement of labor unrest is a criminal offense, and told the labor ministry to take any other action necessary to end strikes of more than 110,000 workers in the war-vital coal and ship-building industries.

There was no indication of wholesale arrests or of summoning troops to break strikes, but Scotland Yard, investigating possible subversive elements behind the spreading "wildcat" strikes, raided Trotskyite Communist offices in London and elsewhere Wednesday, while the Trades Union Congress, parent body of organized British labor, warned that continuance of the work stoppage would be "drastic steps" if he was not heeded.

The strikes already have hampered preparations for the invasion of western Europe, the T. U. C. said, adding that if they are continued they "cannot fail to produce a major national disaster and imperil victory of the Allied cause."

T. U. C. statement, issued after a long conference with Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, declared "unauthorized stoppages of work occurring in the midst of preparations for concerted Allied attack upon Nazi fortified Europe already have impeded these imminent operations and have brought curtailment of essential production."

It warned all workers against individuals and organizations which have been active in fomenting disturbances which now include strikes among coal miners, shipyard and aircraft workers and others. Bevin has promised government action in the next few days on the whole structure of industrial relations.

This apprentices' strike was the first which the British press connected with subversive activities against the war effort. The Daily Telegraph named two organizations, the Workers' Militant Movement and the Revolutionary Com-unist Party, whose members are fanatical believers in class war and revolutionary socialism, as aiming at the overthrow of established machinery for handling industrial disputes.

March was the worst month of strikes since the war began, with more than 1,000,000 lost working days.

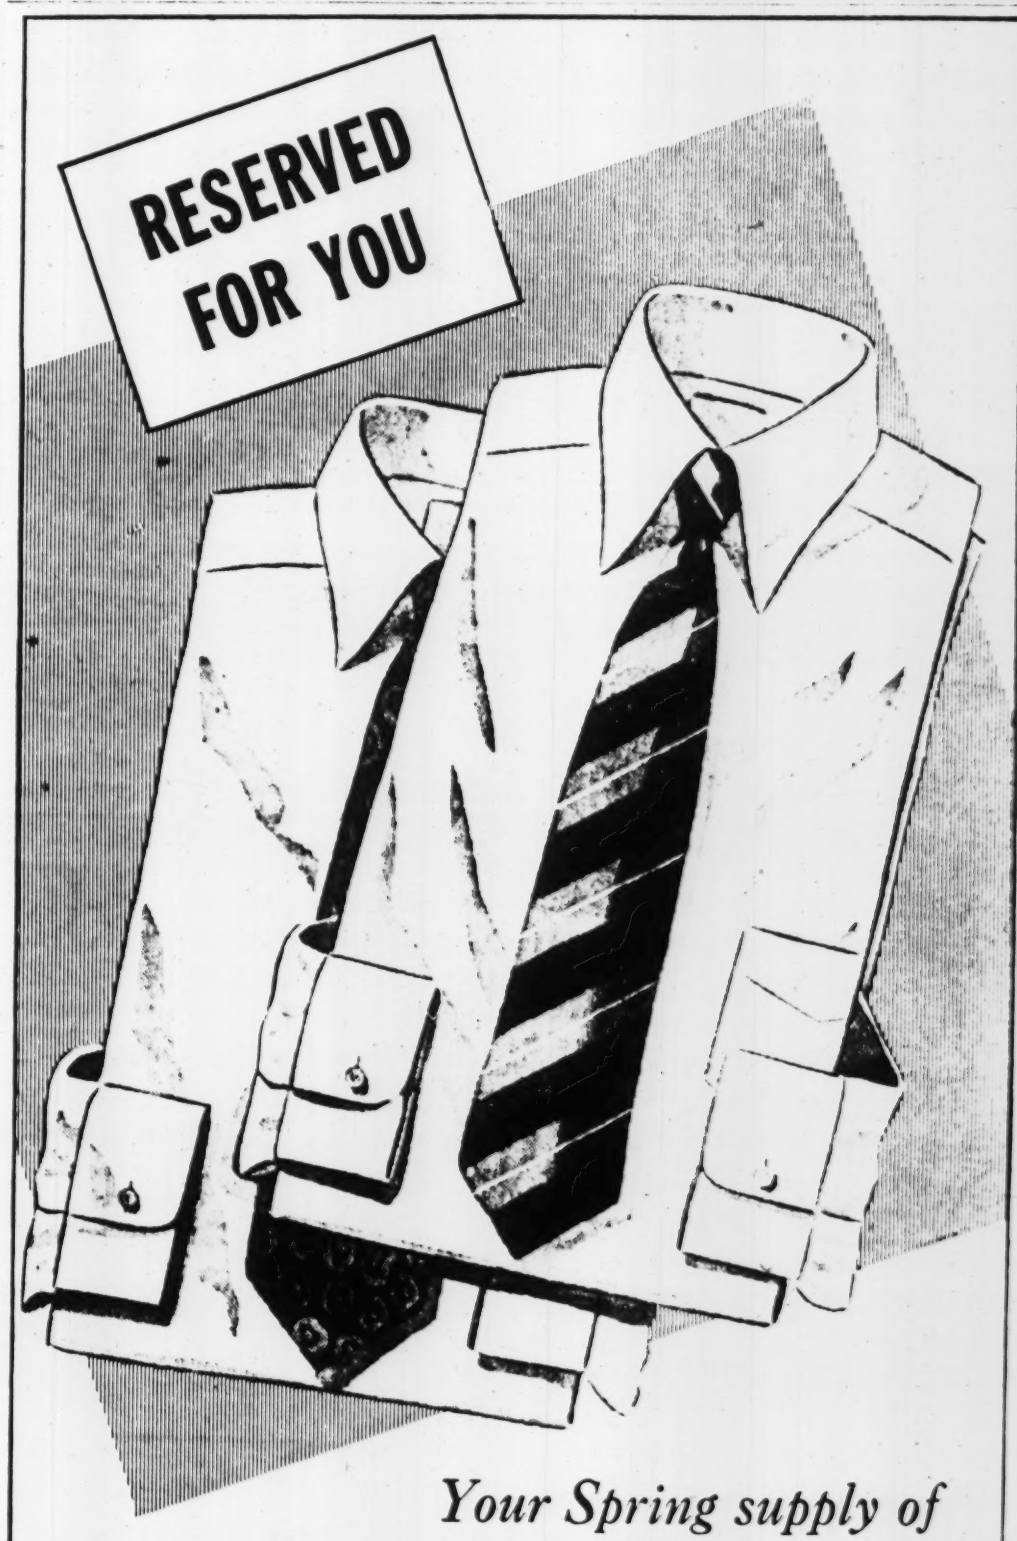

Coal strikes originated several weeks ago in South Wales over provisions of a government wage settlement.

Stake YOUR Claim NOW with War Bonds

It took a lot of grit for a man and wife to stow their children into a prairie schooner with a few bare necessities and fight it out with all the hardships the frontier had to offer. Yet, these self-reliant pioneers proved their ability to win the finest reward a family can have—security in a land of growing opportunities.

Today, solid citizens are staking their claim in America's future by buying and keeping War Bonds. They know Bonds help to win battle after battle. They know, too, that Bonds will provide security and opportunity for personal initiative when war-supported activity ceases.

Do you know of anything that offers you as much for your money as a War Bond?

A journey's end is the beginning of relaxation. In such a moment, Budweiser will prove a welcome companion. Count on Budweiser to make your simple wartime meals taste better. Every sip will tell you why.

Charles Lindbergh Gets Fever Immunization

NEW YORK, April 5.—(P)—Charles A. Lindbergh has received severe fever immunization injections, such as given persons going overseas, at Marine hospital here, but available sources declined to say whether the aviator was planning a trip outside the country. Lindbergh, whose immediate whereabouts were not disclosed, visited the hospital Monday. Navy and hospital authorities had no comment and officials of the Ford Motor Company, his employer, said they knew nothing of his plans.

The Marine hospital is operated by the government but has no direct connection with the Army and Navy. It checks persons arriving or leaving the country, however.

SPARTA, Ga., April 5—While the granite supply dwindles in this section from the present wartime demands, Hancock county has a natural resource which may become valuable in years to come.

Down town theaters will turn into veritable fashion shops over the weekend when the gala Easter parade of gags, gals and gowns makes its entrance on local screens with such cinema fare as "Lady in the Dark," "Cover Girl" and "Broadway Rhythm" are offered for your entertainment.

Two action dramas and a pair of holdovers complete the new program.

Fox

Paramount's pretentious adaptation of the popular Moss Hart Broadway comedy, "Lady in the Dark," opens a special Easter engagement at the Fox today, with Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Jon Hall and Warner Baxter heading the cast.

Filmed in color, the picture retains the original Kurt Weill-Ira Gershwin music. It tells the story of a feminine magazine editor who visits a psychoanalyst. The plot revolves around a series of dreams which she relates to the medic. Milland, Hall and Baxter take turns about making love to the exotic, fickle-minded Ginger.

Rialto

Columbia's dazzling Easter package of screen entertainment, "Cover Girl," a Technicolor musical which features Gene Kelly and Rita Hayworth in the top of the cast, a score of Gershwin-Kern tunes, and 15 of the nation's loveliest cover girls in the featured cast, opens at the Rialto today for an extended engagement.

Miss Hayworth plays the part of a Brooklyn honky-tonk torch singer who aspires to adorn the covers of a leading magazine. The interesting story plot is punctuated with a medley of catchy tunes and glorious production numbers which feature Kelly and Rita in dance numbers.

ALLURING—Anita Colby, who was a recent visitor to Atlanta, heads the bevy of beauties in Columbia's new musical, "Cover Girl," which opens at the Rialto theater today.

Fort Mac's 'Little Old Lady'
Back on Job for Second War

(Picture on Page 1)
By HARRY LE

A little old lady at Fort McPherson has done at least part of a mother's job for the boys of two world wars.

She is Mrs. Lula B. Adams, 70 years old, of 225 Alexander street, N. W., and she is spending these wartime days sewing up the rips in uniform blouses and the snags in khaki pants.

Not only that, but she is back on the same job she had during World War I, when she performed similar duties at Candler warehouse to keep the men in the Army looking the way Uncle Sam likes to have his nephews appear when they step out before the crowds.

Between wars, Mrs. Adams worked at her profession of dressmaking, but recently she returned to her wartime job, because, she explained, "maybe it will help just a little bit with the war effort."

Mrs. Adams has a personal interest in that war effort, because she has five nephews in the service and is proud of them, just as she is proud of two pieces who are helping to make good at the Bell plant in Marietta.

She likes working in the clothing and equipment repair shop out at "Fort Mac" with the 40 other women employed there by the Army Quartermaster Corps and she claims proudly: "Any kind of work they've got—I can do it."

She liked, too, the peacetime work in which she was engaged when the war came along, saying: "They were just as nice to me as they could be."

But working for the Army seemed to her more important.

"Maybe I can help just a little bit," she said, "and I guess this is a time when all of us ought to help all we can."

today by the Office of Price Administration.
OPA ruled that gardeners may receive special allotments good for 300 miles for traveling to and from their plots this season.
To obtain the special ration, however, the gardener must be regularly cultivating an area of at least 1,500 square feet which he visits twice weekly. Also, he must make a ride-sharing agreement if possible and show that no alternative means of transportation is available.

Easter Neckwear

A sparkling colorful tie, like the topknot of a tropical bird, is intended to accent an otherwise drab costume.

Placed right under the chin where color is reflected in the face, it gives a touch of glamor to one's personality that all men should strive to obtain.

Our broad selection of Easter neckwear is designed by such notable stylists as Wembley, Cheney, Beau Brummel and Van Heusen.

Deportation Order Withdrawn Against Earl Browder's Wife

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(P)—The Board of Immigration Appeals today withdrew its 1940 order of deportation against Mrs. Raissa Berkman Browder, Russian-born wife of Earl Browder, American Communist leader.
Effect of the order was to clear a way for Mrs. Browder to enter the country legally.
Technically, the board granted Mrs. Browder permission to leave this country within six months, but under the procedure it will be possible for her to return merely by crossing into Canada or Mexico and having her visa stamped by an American consul.
The procedure, authorized by the immigration act, permits re-examination of an alien in this country by the immigration and naturalization service before he or she leaves on a trip designed to obtain an immigration visa.
If approved, as is regarded as certain, Mrs. Browder may re-enter the United States legally as an immigrant, under the Russian quota.
The Justice Department released the board's decision without comment. No action by Attorney General Biddle is required.

To Farmers—Linder

Instead of voting a farm subsidy, congress should compel the Commodity Credit Corporation to "repay the farmers probably a billion dollars which it took from them by profiteering," Georgia's Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder said.

Linder, in a Market Bulletin editorial yesterday, said the corporation is selling at inflated prices cotton and other crops taken over on government loans as far back as seven years ago. He cited an instance where he said the CCC loaned $11,048 on 252 bales of cotton in 1937, and then sold this cotton last year for $25,961.

Life With Red Cross Overseas Described By Miss Winship

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Life as a Red Cross worker overseas is packed with interest, thrills and excitement, according to letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winship from their second daughter, Miss Margaret Winship, now on duty in the Mediterranean area on the picturesque and romantic Isle of Capri.

The trim little Atlantian arrived in North Africa in December, and it was from there that she took her first plane trip—from Africa to Italy, where she is now stationed, with stops en route at Oran, Algiers, Tunis and Sicily.

In a letter written soon after her arrival in Africa, Margaret wrote that there were "millions of zippers, bobby pins, and lots of cosmetics, perfumes, etc., but the prices are exorbitant." She also mentions the odd shoes worn by the North Africans, which are made with soles of either cork, wood or rope, and also the ugly black stockings most of the girls wear. The girls wear well tailored slacks most of the time and have beautiful sweaters and scarves.

Food is plentiful and in almost every restaurant one can buy huge steaks, french fried potatoes, and all the "trimmings." As Margaret writes, "I weighed 104 when I left home and now I weigh 116. We always have three huge meals a day—fresh meat twice, usually steak, chicken, beef and lamb; fresh vegetables, raw and cooked; plenty of bread, butter, coffee, and pastries. All I lack is milk, and the only thing I don't have here that I had at home is corn bread and buttermilk!"

Upon her arrival in Italy, Margaret wrote that out of 40 Red Cross girls, 25 were assigned to the Italian station. The wear all green and yellow orchids were boys stationed there will be interested to learn from Margaret that the boys have everything, such as cigarettes, matches, toilet articles, chewing gum, candy, cigarette lighters, etc.

The Italian people as a whole like Americans, and treat them with the highest respect, and are continually giving parties, dances and teas, and inviting the Red Cross girls. Margaret has been especially impressed by Italy's music, and so much so that she has begun a collection of various shell musical instruments inlaid with mother of pearl. She also writes with interest of the number of artists in Italy and of the many oil paintings, the historical spots she visits, and of her interest in mountain climbing.

Margaret's work is entirely with the enlisted men and she wrote of her first Christmas away from home which she describes as "a day never to be forgotten." The food and decorations were tops she writes, and adds, "but when I looked around and saw all those men with that faraway look in their eyes, all with the picture of the girl they loved propped against a glass in front of them, I knew there was little I could do but smile and wish them a Merry Christmas!" Later, she called on an Italian family who had an elaborate feast for her and another Red Cross girl. On Christmas Eve Margaret, along with many of the soldiers, attended midnight service in the chapel and Margaret sang in the choir.

Margaret has seen many Atlantians since she landed on Italian soil, among them being Gus Ashcraft, Henry Stevenson, Grady Wells, Lewis Turner, Matt Johnson, Howard Stanley, Frank Hemstead and many others.

Margaret's enthusiasm for her work is equalled only by her sparkling personality, and reports reaching her parents by the servicemen on furlough rate her as "tops" among the Red Cross girls and one of the most popular workers overseas.

In her last letter to her parents, Margaret wrote that a company of Negro troops came into the center one day and she heard one of them pointing out Atlanta as a map of the United States. Naturally she spoke to him and received the following reply: "Oh, Miss Winship, I shore is glad to see you! I used to work for that fine man, Mr. Tom Glenn, and my pappy is working for him right now while I'm over here fighting!"

Mrs. McAdoo Here To Learn 'How It Was Done' in Georgia

Georgia women played such an important part in the recent war bond drive that reverberations of their success have echoed as far away as California. Which accounts for the presence in the city today of Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, of Los Angeles, regional director of the western states for the drive, and the daughter of the late President Woodrow Wilson.

Mrs. McAdoo is headed for England at an early date as a guest of the British Ministry of Information. But before she leaves on her trip, she wants an over-all picture of how the job was done in Georgia, because she has been greatly impressed with the contribution of Georgia women to the drive.

Mrs. McAdoo will be central figure at a luncheon to be held today at the Capital City Club as the guest of Charles J. Currie, executive chairman of the 16th district of the War Finance Committee. Mrs. Ralph Butler, state chairman of the women's division, will act as official hostess at the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, her associate.

Special guests will be Mrs. Green Warren, district chairman; Mrs. Clifford Ragsdale and Mrs. Charles Huckle, who are in charge of women's activities for the 16th district.

Another important guest at the luncheon will be Mrs. Nancy Robinson, of Jackson, Miss., sister of Mrs. Currie, who is regional director of the southeastern states for the fourth war bond drive. Both she and Mrs. McAdoo will comment briefly on what they have accomplished in their respective regions.

J. Lon Duckworth, state Democratic chairman, said yesterday the official ballots will be ready for distribution within a few days. County chairmen will add the names of county, judicial district, senatorial district, and congressional district candidates to the state list and have the ballots printed and distributed.

Governor Arnall said he would summon the state war ballot commission soon to speed up delivery of the ballots overseas. Friends or relatives may request that ballots be sent to servicemen and women without awaiting printing of the ballots, Arnall said.

WLB Member Helps Get Raise For Gravediggers

The plea of a Florida firm that "a good gravedigger is far superior to a common laborer," backed by the expert testimony of a public member of the board, recently won a decision for an increase in wages for this group of employees before the Fourth Regional War Labor Board.

"I've dug graves myself. As a young man, I remember that the neighbors up in the mountains always volunteered to dig the graves. And I can personally vouch for the fact that it is more than merely digging ditches," the public member, now a widely known educator, affirmed.

With this expert testimony of one of its own members before it, the regional WLB approved a voluntary application of the Woodlawn Park Company, Miami, to raise gravediggers from the common labor rate of 50 cents to 60 cents an hour.

ANKARA, April 4.—(Delayed)—The semi-official Turkish newspaper Ulus characterized today as highly reassuring Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov's statement that Russia had sent her troops into Rumania purely for military reasons and not with territorial expansion in mind.

Mother Teaches Daughter To Be Her Own Chaperon

By Dr. George W. Crane

(An intelligent mother teaches her daughters to be their own chaperons. She equips her children with the facts and verbally explores with them the possible dilemmas in which they may find themselves.)

CASE C 210: Josephine P., aged 19, has been working as a stenographer for the year since graduation from high school.

"I am so miserable. I think I shall run away from home," she sobs dejectedly, and dabbles at her eyes with her handkerchief.

"My mother absolutely will not let me have a date with a boy."

"I have argued with Mother, but she won't budge an inch. My two older sisters live at home, too, and they side with her for they say they didn't get to go out with boys when they were my age."

Ways To Use Oversupply Of Eggs

By Sally Saver.

The children will not have to look far for Easter eggs this year because at the moment we have an oversupply. This seasonal and temporary oversupply is caused by a large spring production, a shortage of storage space, shortage of shipping cases and labor and transportation situations. Whatever the reasons for having plenty of eggs, it seems to me we should accept them with thanks and use them as often as we can in our meal planning.

If there are members of the family who will not eat eggs as is, tuck theirs into salads, custards, puddings, cakes, breads, vegetable soups, custard sauces, just to mention a few of the possibilities of getting this rich, protective food into the diet. Here are some dishes to serve while eggs are plentiful. First of all remember:

SOUTHERN SPOON BREAD

1 Cup corn meal
1 1/2 Teaspoons salt
2 Cups milk, scalded
2 1/2 Teaspoons baking powder
2 Eggs, separated
Mix corn meal and salt and stir slowly into hot milk. Cook over hot water until thick and smooth, stirring occasionally. Cool slightly. Stir in baking powder and well-beaten egg yolks; then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a well-greased baking dish, or not too deep casserole and bake in a moderate oven about 35 minutes, or until firm, and crust is lightly browned. Serve from the baking dish.

EGGS BENEDICT

Toast rounds of bread, or split and toast brown or English muffins. Place a thin slice of cooked ham or crisp bacon on each piece of toast and on the ham place two poached eggs. Cover with hot hollandaise sauce and serve at once. An excellent luncheon or supper dish.

Curried eggs are a treat for those who like this East Indian seasoning. Make it this way: Hard cook six eggs. Cool, shell. Make a sauce: Melt 4 tablespoons margarine in a skillet; add 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, and 2 tablespoons chopped celery. Cook 2 or 3 minutes. Stir into this 1 teaspoon curry powder, 1 teaspoon salt and 3 drops tabasco. Add 3 tablespoons flour and blend. Stir in slowly 2 cups cold milk. Cook stirring constantly 3 to 4 minutes. Make a bed of hot, flaky rice, noodles, spaghetti or potato on a platter. Arrange the eggs over it, cut in quarters. Pour curry sauce over all and serve hot.

EGGNOG
Fine for children, older persons or convalescents.

1 Cup scalded milk
2 Egg yolks
Dash of salt
Few drops of flavoring
Beat egg yolks until light, sprinkle with nutmeg, add flavoring and stir into hot milk. Serve at once.

Jack was off on a week's spree in Bombay . . .

He found himself in a knapsack position.

When Kelley bathed, the resourceful actor would flee.

GOOD NIGHT, SWEET PRINCE

By GENE FOWLER.
Installment XXVIII.

Today, Jack Barrymore Again Goes Astray But Back to America He Finds Himself Checkmated by the Quiet Mr. Kelley.

By the middle of December—and in spite of the yogi's warning—Jack seemed almost restored to good health. He had had nothing strong to drink and was not morose.

Then one day a shipboard drinking companion called on him and he disappeared from his hotel. He was off on a week's spree. When he returned, he promised the doctor not to have another lapse but two days later he again vanished. The treatments were discontinued and Jack sailed for America.

He picked up some bar companions, a few days out of Bombay, and his morose mood changed into a seeming gaiety. He neglected to eat. His headaches returned. His ankles again became swollen.

At Suez, where the Victoria docked overnight, Barrymore went ashore with a ship's acquaintance. He returned on board the next morning in an agitated condition.

"Give me 21 pounds," he said to his manager. "I'm told that I owe it as a gambling debt. I apparently borrowed it from the man with whom I went ashore last night."

"But you never gamble," Hotchener pointed out. "How can it be that you made an exception last night?"

"I simply don't know. I don't remember a bit of last night. I wasn't especially tight, yet I can't seem to recall where we went. But I must pay the 21 pounds, for I told a complaint is being lodged against me at the British consulate."

At Naples Jack became quite ill. He said he didn't want to go to England to do Hamlet.

"What do you suggest we should do about your contract?" asked his manager.

"Tell them that Hamlet is dead, very dead." Then, with a smile, he added: "But there is always King Lear . . . but later, much later. Cable them that urgent business calls me to America. It does. It calls me anywhere but London."

The actor sailed from Genoa aboard the Rex on January 20. "I wonder," he said, as the ship got under weigh for America, "if that damned old yogi didn't have more to tell me than he did? Much more."

During his 10 years in Hollywood he had made $2,634,500 and spent almost all of it with lavish hand. Truly he now was in the winter of discontent. Dolores moved out of their Beverly Hills home.

In New York, Jack was removed to a hospital where he met Elaine Jacobs, a Hunter College student. She announced her new name was Elaine Barrie and Jack declared her his protegee.

Dolores filed suit for a divorce, which she obtained October 9, 1935. Jack pulled himself together and the following spring obtained the part of Mercutio in the production of "Romeo and Juliet." He was not the star but supported Norma Shearer and the late Leslie Howard.

Barrymore now permitted himself to be placed in residence in the private West Los Angeles sanitarium of Mrs. Louise Sinar Kelley. Mrs. Kelley's husband, Jim, was Barrymore's "guard" during the months at the sanitarium. Jim also accompanied his charge to the motion picture sets, and watched over him during occasional social expeditions.

The Kelley establishment was a retreat for gentlemen of jangled nerves. Young Mr. Kelley was a low, dark, rather silent chap, who looked like an assistant curator at an art museum. When, however, any of his patients became unruly, he could and did reveal an astonishing familiarity with Oriental wrestling holds. Mr. Kelley's calisthenics bewildered but never maimed the guests.

Barrymore's introduction to Kelley involved a whirling ritual. The actor had erroneously presumed that the quiet Kelley was neither a strong nor an energetic person. Jack jumped at his new acquaintance. The next moment Barrymore found himself in a knapsack position on Kelley's back, and dazedly on his way to a bedroom.

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur now were keeping friendly eyes upon Barrymore during such times as he took recess from the sanitarium. I myself had gone to Damascus to buy a sword in May of 1935, and returned to Los Angeles early next year to learn from Hecht and MacArthur that our friend was subsisting on one can of beer a day. I was told by the playwrights that Jack seldom received anyone in private other than his new mentors. They added that Barrymore, when informed by them that his present manumane could be seen almost daily in big journalistic headlines, seemed amazed, then splendidly detached about the whole business.

Barrymore's funds were getting low, and occasionally he asked, "Where is all the money I made?" But he wanted no pity. It was only that bills now sailed like confetti through the air and Jack wanted to owe no one.

Occasionally, however, he would "escape" from Kelley and the sanitarium to show up in the night clubs. Whenever Kelley disrobed to bathe, the resourceful actor would flee.

Vegetables, When Overcooked, Result in Loss of Food Value

By Ida Jean Kain.

Here's an item for the bulletin boards of all apartment houses and a memo for every housewife: It's the cook, not what's cooking, that is to blame when unpleasant cooking odors permeate the place. This is official. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that so-called strong scented vegetables like onions, turnips, and cabbage and all its relatives, give off very little odor if just cooked until tender. But when overcooked—the sulphides they contain are broken down and give off a disagreeable odor and develop a stronger flavor. Nutritionally, the result is a loss of food value.

When cooking the vegetables, odors generally can be avoided by covering them with water, cooking them uncovered, and only long enough to make them tender.

If the unsavory smell of frying pervades the air, the cause is overcooking, or cooking at too high a temperature. Fat should never be cooked hot enough to smoke, for at the smoking point it breaks down chemically.

NO SWITCH TO FOOD PILLS

Are vitamins concentrates the answer to vitamin deficiencies, and will we ever simplify eating by taking a food capsule? At a recent nutrition conference, Dr. W. H. Sebrell, eminent scientist, assured us that we are not heading for a kind of food pill.

It is his opinion that too frequently people take vitamin pills indiscriminately without checking and correcting their food habits. Good nutrition certainly is more than fortifying poor food habits with vitamin concentrates. Eating good food is the natural way to get a balanced diet.

FOOD HABITS CHANGEABLE

A survey of war workers shows that people are quite willing to improve their food habits—if they get the chance. In one plant where well-balanced meals were placed before the workers, 56 per

Agencies Hear Abandoned Plane Flies 150 Miles After Hits by Flak

Better training on the job can reduce personnel requirements as much as 50 per cent, Miss Dorothy Whelchel, United States Civil Service training officer, told representatives of 12 government agencies here ranging from the Office of Emergency Management to the Federal penitentiary.

Quoting, during an open forum, on actual results of the job instruction training program now being undertaken on a nationwide basis, W. E. Arnold, of the regional office of the Social Security Board, reported that this agency had reduced its staff from 13,000 to 9,800 and yet do more work.

Pointing out that federal employment has increased from 900,000 persons at the time of the invasion of Poland to over 3,000,000 today, Miss Whelchel emphasized that 83 per cent of the employees today are not doing the same work as a year ago. The job instruction training program trains these workers for the new jobs as well as the inexperienced people for their first jobs, she said.

Red Cross Requisitions Needed Surgical Gauze

The Red Cross has requisitioned surgical gauze for 104,000,000 dressings and it is now en route to 48 major cities in the south east, including Atlanta, for wrapping by volunteer Red Cross workers.

In addition to the dressings to be prepared by the volunteer workers in large cities, gauze for 60,000,000 more surgical dressings has been ordered from manufacturers to be shipped direct to 1,000 chapters in smaller cities in the south, regional Red Cross headquarters here disclosed.

Who Won? Dewey or America Firsts?

Wendell Willkie has withdrawn from any further Republican primaries and has asked that his name not be presented to the Republican convention in June.

He withdrew from the campaign following his utter defeat in the Wisconsin primary where Thomas E. Dewey ran first and Willkie fourth, failing to win one single delegate.

The manner of his withdrawal would seem to make it mandatory for the long-silent Dewey to speak.

For in his statement, which was typical of the man in that it was boldly honest and to the point, Willkie declared the issue to be drawn.

"I was disappointed," he said, "in the result in Wisconsin, but doubly so because the candidate who led the poll for delegates is known as one active in the organizations such as the America First."

He already had said he deliberately entered the campaign in Wisconsin because he wanted to test the attitude of those normally Republican states toward international co-operation, believing as he does that no Republican can win who avoids that issue.

Mr. Willkie has charged that Thomas E. Dewey's leading delegate in Wisconsin is a representative of the notorious America First Committee which preached appeasement of Hitler and which said this country would not, and could not, be attacked and needed only to remain out of the war to be safe.

Mr. Dewey has remained silent, according to his supporters, because the scalded cat dreads even cold water. He was scalded at the 1940 Republican convention when he led on the first ballot only to see the Willkie star rise to ascendancy.

This time, they said, he wanted to be silent until Willkie's position was known.

Now, unhappily for Mr. Dewey, Mr. Willkie's position is known, but Mr. Dewey's position is all the more obscured by the revelation that his leading supporter in Wisconsin is an isolationist leader.

The question now is: Is this country going to repeat its policy of 1919 when it repudiated the policies of Woodrow Wilson and took a Harding to help bring on the war of 1941, and where does Mr. Dewey stand? With his leader in Wisconsin? Or against him?

It now is very necessary that we not have a campaign of silence but that the sphinx of Albany, New York, speak and let the people know where he stands.

The Chaplin Verdict

Charles Spencer Chaplin, a movie comedian known round the world, has been given a verdict of not guilty in a trial in which he stood charged with violating the Mann Act.

The verdict, in a case which was unusually sordid, was undoubtedly correct. Mr. Chaplin should have been acquitted.

But he stands convicted of being the sort of person we do not really require to entertain us. His record of conduct and morality is such as to offend the people of this country. This conviction also is justified from the record, and while it carries no fine or prison sentence, it is more severe than what would have been the sentence had he been found guilty as charged.

We hope there will be no more movies by Charles Spencer Chaplin.

Justice and the New Solicitor

Up in the splendid county of Floyd, the electorate has chosen Vaughan E. Terrell as solicitor of the city court of that county.

Solicitor Terrell is blind. He lost his eyesight at the age of 10 years. He attended the state's Academy for the Blind. Friends assisted him through the Atlanta Law School.

Justice is pictured as being blind, and there is something unusually appropriate in the fact that a solicitor will depend entirely on cold fact and logic in a court of justice and not on what emotions his eyes might see.

The new solicitor hopes his success will inspire the blind persons of the state. It should.

—GIVE BLOOD—WA 9635—

Figures Don't Lie

One of the troubles—and there are many—with the average politician is his predilection for overestimating the gullibility of the electorate.

A typical indication of this is the manner in which the ward-heeler mentality seeks to prejudice voters and gain support with effusive attacks dealing in grandiose generalities and perverted half-truths.

Take, by way of specific example, the continuing tirades of would-be President John Bricker, Governor of Ohio, against his favorite menace, federal bureaucracy.

Ohio, Bricker is wont to tell anyone who will listen, has some 20,600 state employees. Yet the federal government, he cries in horror, has 111,000 persons on its pay roll in the state.

It is undeniably a shocking revelation, and Honest John milks it for every whit of its dramatic worth.

What Honest John does not point out, of course, is the fact that, of that terrible toll of federal employees, 86,000 are employed by the Army, 4,000 by the Navy, and 18,000 in the state's post offices.

There may be, somewhere in some bright area, a simple, trusting, illiterate soul who will accept John's figures at face value and go galloping off to put an end to this fantastic sky-rocketing of federal employment.

There may be. But if so, he was probably stupid enough to be going to vote for Honest John anyhow.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

(The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.)

No Line-Up at Church

Editor, Constitution: We have been reading and hearing many things about the juvenile delinquency that we have in Georgia, as well as the nation over.

First, I would say as a young person of 19 years, that we should not place the blame on the younger person. We are taught, and have to learn most everything we know from someone older than we. It really isn't juvenile delinquency; it is adult delinquency.

The only place I have been lately that you don't have to wait in line to get in the door is the church. What can parents expect of their children, if they do the wrong things before them?

How many people would be at church on Sunday if they had to pay for a charge for their children to go in places to drink, dine, dance and eat?

And as for mothers working, most of them spend the money foolishly, and leaving their children to do as they please. I think they should sacrifice, and stay home and discipline their children as they should.

MILDRED MARIE ALLEN, Austell, Ga.

Russian Aid

Editor, Constitution: The Georgia drive for Share Your Clothes With Russians begins April 17.

Atlanta is to have another clothing campaign this year. Last year our city schools and practically all organizations took part in this sharing with the Russians.

This is not a campaign for money but a drive to collect clothes and shoes for the destitute Russians. The Atlanta public schools again will be the collection centers for clothes for Russians.

MRS. ROBERT A. LONG, Chairman, Atlanta.

"Accurate Story"

Editor, Constitution: When I read the Associated Press dispatch which your paper obtained from Mr. Ford, I was certain he was quoted correctly. But wishing to have the complete story, I sent you your paper for it.

May I say that your city editor did what was to my mind an exceedingly good piece of work. While not connected with the Ford people in any way, directly or indirectly, I have for years been greatly interested in the work of the Ford people. Your editor's write-up of the interview was the most gentlemanly and accurate story about Mr. Ford which I have ever read.

May I digress to say one more thing. I noted in the same issue, a letter from a young lady who hoped that some day the words "rebel" and "Yank" would be forgotten. May I say that I am of the age of 43, have always lived in this part of the United States. And I never heard the word "rebel" used in connection with American since I was a child in my father's house in Missouri. He and his folks came from Kentucky during 1861. And I've never heard the word "Yank" used, except in connection with a New York ball club, and a few "news-papers" during the first World War.

I have visited the south only twice, but Mrs. McGill and I hope very much to do more of it, after the war. And may I say that we do not see enough of you "southerners" around here.

DAN MCCARTY, Wichita, Kan.

About 4-F's

Editor, Constitution: In regard to Ralph McGill's criticism of men rejected for Army service, my opinion those 4-F's who were turned down because of bad health, and others who are in professional trades, are helping the war effort very much.

WESLEY G. BAILEY II, Atlanta.

(Mr. McGill's column referred, plainly, to those 4-F's who were not in war jobs, in college or professions.)

Baptists Convene

Editor, Constitution: The Baptist preachers of southwest Georgia will convene April 10-14, 1944, in a series of conferences at the First Baptist church, Norman Park, Ga., under the direction of pastor, W. T. Bodenhamer.

Classes on "Missions," "The Preacher and His Task," "The Book of Acts" will be conducted by Dr. A. Scott Patterson, returned missionary from Africa; Dr. M. V. Stedham, pastor of the Baptist church, Cartersville, Ga., and Dr. R. C. Gresham, pastor of the First Baptist church, Moultrie, Ga.

Among the visiting ministers will be Dr. T. F. Callaway, formerly president of the Georgia Baptist Convention, and pastor of the First Baptist church, Thomasville; Dr. D. M. Sanders, pastor of the First Baptist church, Tifton; Dr. Arthur Jackson, secretary of the Georgia Baptist Foundation; Dr. Paul Carroll, president of Norman Junior College; Dr. W. H. Faust, secretary of evangelism for the state of Georgia.

All pastors in southwest Georgia are cordially invited to be present.

W. H. FAUST, Department of Evangelism, Georgia Baptist Convention.

Appreciated

Editor, Constitution: Your editorial, "More Money for Teachers," of March the first issue of your paper should stir the citizens of Georgia to a realization of a very grave situation in the educational systems of the state. A problem so serious as this one demands earnest consideration of those who are in position to help in its solution.

Your stand on this important question is deeply appreciated.

(MRS.) LURA W. HARRELL, West Point.

Sound of a Distant Bandwagon?

It seems only yesterday that Mr. Harry Woodring, pink-of-face and jovial, was in our midst, confident and strong in his mind to save the nation from Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He was the leader of the crusade and, he confided, all he wanted out of it was a cabinet position.

The woods were on fire, he said, and those who believed in Jeffersonian democracy were putting on their armor and bucking on their sword.

Now, alas and alack! the chief knight has retired from the lists. In a statement, a very frank one, even though heavy with disillusionment, Mr. Woodring announces his retirement. From now on the movement will have only his "good wishes" and "unflinching support." He will not lead it.

The money for the crusade, a mere $1,500,000, has not been found, according to Mr. Woodring. There had been many promises. When Mr. Woodring was in our midst he said raising the money was his easiest task.

Now, it seems, many promised but few reached for their check-books.

Not only that, and this seemed to disillusion Mr. Woodring most of all, the boys would not stand up and be counted. They would join in denunciation. They would slap his back and clasp his hand. They would assure him of their interest and send him on his way rejoicing. But, well before he had got to the next town, Mr. Woodring would recall that the man's last words had been, "Of course, I cannot be publicly identified with this. I am for you, but—"

All this seems to have saddened Mr. Woodring. So, he has retired as the protector of the innocent and leaves the movement his good wishes and his support.

Some one else, apparently, must take up the torch.

OKLAHOMA Some profess to see a significance in the fact that Mr. Woodring put down his torch and toga within a few days after the returns from Oklahoma's congressional race.

Did he hear the sound of a distant bandwagon? Did some of his faithful appear restless, with a far-away look in their eyes, as if they saw something coming over the horizon? Mr. Woodring does not say.

It is probably true that the returns from Oklahoma are not of too great importance. They are important only because the Republican leadership in that state was overconfident to the extent of informing the nation that here was the test, the acid test, for the Democratic party. They would pitch the issue squarely on the issue of proadministration and antiadministration. And there it would rest.

The result was the largest Democratic victory in some years. It was after this that the disillusioned Mr. Woodring said, "These so-called leaders (whom he had contacted) appear too timid politically and economically to stand up and be counted."

The remnants will carry on, they say. John J. O'Connor, of New York, former congressman, will head up things for a while, pushing up the smoke and all-but-extinguished torch where Mr. Woodring dropped it. Funds still are required. And solved. It is now not necessary to stand up and be counted. Just send a check.

FROM THE SOUTH? It is said, by Mr. O'Connor, that soon the south, he is not sure, they will have a vice chairman from Mr. Woodring, while in our midst, he planned "to interview Mr. Eugene Talmadge and Mr. Tom Linder in Atlanta and a newspaper publisher in Macon, Ga." He also said he had been promised funds and support from "a very wealthy and influential man" in Atlanta. Mr. Woodring did not identify this man. He did not even hint as to the identity. But he seemed happy.

Now, in the lack of any additional information, we must take it that this very wealthy and influential man turned out to be one of those who were economically and politically timid.

Mr. Woodring's statement said that "hundreds of thousands of dollars were promised. Only a small fraction was delivered."

It is said to see a man disillusioned. But the fact remains that such efforts, founded on personal dislike rather than on principle, are doomed to be received with timidity, both from the check-book and roll-call viewpoints.

It is all water over the dam. Wisconsin has given us the answer.

Tom Dewey, the petite Governor of New York, will be the Republican choice. Wendell Willkie's herculean effort in Wisconsin went for naught. Dewey, if there was any doubt about it before, is the sure choice of the Republican convention.

He is a vote-getter and a good campaigner, on the radio. He does not do so well when the audience can see him.

The Democrats must decide whether they want to be in the fight with a chance to win, with Roosevelt, or decide that this year they are not interested in politics, and leave it to Dewey by default.

We Should Return to War Aims

With Which We Entered Fight

On Sunday evening the Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, Mr. Molotov, held a press conference, an all but unique event. He announced that the Red army had crossed the Prut river and taken Rumania, and that the Soviet Union sought neither territory in Rumania nor the alteration of the existing social structure. This is an announcement of first-rate significance, for Europe has wavered as the Soviet Union has advanced.

The question was: Are Soviet war aims limited or unlimited? I suggest that, of all the Allies, the Soviet war aims are the most limited. They are to drive out the German invader and establish permanently the Russian borders of 1940.

What Soviet peace aims may be another matter. But it is a mistake to confuse war aims and peace aims—the objectives for which a war is fought, with the principles upon which peace can be established. War and peace are opposites. War is conflict. Peace is agreement. Wars are thus more likely to be followed by lasting peace if they are waged for limited objectives. Wars waged for unlimited objectives are bound to be immensely protracted. They endure until one side or the other is utterly exhausted, and what usually follows is a truce lasting only until the defeated has had time to recover and find new allies.

Among wars for limited objectives we may count the wars for independence or for national consolidation, such as the American Revolutionary War. Its object was to compel Britain to relinquish to the United States the right to govern the United States. Its aim was not to destroy the British Empire. It was followed by another war within a generation over the issue of the freedom of the seas, since when Britain and America have lived in perpetual peace.

SAFETY FOR DEMOCRACY The first World War established a safe. It was "to make the world safe for democracy." In that phrase a peace aim was confused with a war aim. A grandiose project for world organization in the League of Nations was projected, while the belligerents constantly expanded their original war aims. At the end of the war these expanding claims were in such conflict, even among the Allies, that it was impossible to make a League of Nations which would function. Instead of destroying the obstacles to peace, innumerable new ones had been created. The vanquished felt the aim of a "world safe for democracy" had been abandoned, while the overlapping claims of the victors were the source of dissatisfactions and new alliances.

The original Franco-British objective in this war was to set a definite limit to German expansion.

But Hitler's war aims were illimitable. Thus he was never able to build a real coalition, for his aims were in conflict with those of Italy. He intended by war to dominate the European peninsula as a basis from which to break Russia, annex at least the Ukraine, and become master of Eurasia and beyond it of anything he could get.

This war aim was also incompatible with his peace aim of the New Order. Europe was not to accept domination and inequality so even at the subjected nations the war passed into the phase of guerrilla resistance.

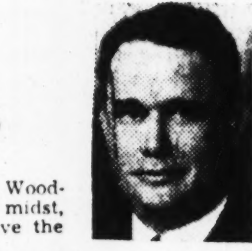

PEACE OBJECTIVES A year and a half after this war began it was still possible to define its European objectives. They were to force Germany back to the borders of 1937, compel Germany to liquidate a regime which had thrown Europe and the world into panic; and return to the family of nations, due reparation having been made for the terrible damage done and satisfactory evidence being forthcoming that Germany was prepared to abandon aggression. As late as the spring of 1941, these were the war aims of Mr. Churchill in Europe.

They were not peace aims. It was obvious that Europe would have to live with the results of future internal aggressions. Among Europeans of all nationalities there were many concepts for reorganization, most of them embracing programs of federalism to supplant dubious alliances, futile neutralities, and the temptation to aggression caused by the existence of relatively defenseless states. This phase of the war was notable for its rationalism. War aims and peace aims were separated, and were compatible with each other.

The confusion now reigning is that we are trying to create the peace by the war. But peace is the result of a peace policy, and war only the means of destroying the obstacles to it.

It is increasingly clear that the Soviets see this. They are conducting a war for definite national objectives. Not once have they uttered war aims beyond those objectives. They are, in fact, waging a more conservative war than the Allies. What they will do in peace is another matter—but it belongs to the peace.

And I believe we would get this war over much quicker, and have an infinitely greater promise of lasting peace, if we would return to the war aims with which it began.

Dies Committee

NEW YORK.—The Dies committee of the house of representatives has been operating since May 26, 1938. And has performed a great public service under difficult conditions.

A brief history of the committee may remove some prejudices created by the New Deal-Communist organization and its radio and press clique in Washington.

The Dies committee was appointed as successor to an earlier committee which had had somewhat the same mission. John McCormack, of Massachusetts, the New Deal's leader in the house of representatives, was chairman of this earlier committee and Samuel Dickstein, of New York, was vice chairman. However, Mr. McCormack was not very active and Mr. Dickstein took over and ran the show. He was mainly concerned with the oppression of the Jews in Germany, which was just then becoming severe, and with the extension of the Hitlerian anti-Jewish campaign to the United States. He was less interested, if he had any hostile interest at all, in Communism as a subversive influence. Mr. Dies has looked into not only Hitlerian and Italian Fascism, but Communism as well. He also discovered alarming evidence of the Japanese intentions before Pearl Harbor and presented it to the government.

Mr. Dickstein preferred not to be chairman of the new committee because he felt that the fact of his being a Jew would embarrass the inquiry. However he did hope to be named a member and was disappointed when Speaker Bankhead passed him by. He had enjoyed great publicity as vice chairman and director of the McCormack committee.

Started on Nazis The Dies committee started off on the Nazis and received a cordial press from the New Deal-Communist element in Washington. Journalism which was almost unchallenged at the time. But when Mr. Dies turned to the Communist and began to expose men and women Communists and fellow travelers in appointive jobs in the New Deal, he came under attack at once. One legitimate criticism laid against him was that his methods were irregular and un-conventional. However, he was only following the method of Senator Hugo Black, late of the Ku Klux Klan, which had received noisy approval when Black was hounding political opponents of the New Deal and earning, as his reward, a seat on the supreme court.

New Deal journalists openly heckled Mr. Dies' witnesses at public hearings and Mrs. Roosevelt, to show her disapproval of any interference with her Communist friends, publicly sympathized with members of the Muscovite student and youth racket called before the committee and ostensibly invited them to lunch at the White House.

However, the Dies committee has examined about 175 witnesses concerning Axis activities, German, Italian, Japanese and American and including the leading Bundists of the prewar period. And has about 4,000 pages of their testimony. In 1940, the Dies committee seized the files of a number of subversive German agencies and American offshoots of German propaganda and espionage arms, and the closing of the German and Italian consulates followed the presentation of this material to the State Department.

More recently, the Department of Justice went to the files of the Dies committee, now grown to enormous size, for information on the indictments of 30 Americans on charges of seditious activity were based. Much of the evidence which will be presented in these trials was turned over by the Dies committee. It is important to note also that information of great importance now available to various departments of the government, including national defense, doubtless would have been destroyed by the enemy agencies if it had not already been seized by Dies.

Warned of Japs

In September, 1941, alarmed by discoveries on the west coast, Dies planned to hold public hearings in Washington of a number of witnesses whose testimony might have aroused the people to the danger of attack by Japan. Three months before Pearl Harbor, he wrote the attorney general's office inquiring whether such hearings would interfere with the government's plans of international relations. Matthew F. McGuire, acting attorney general, replied that he, President Roosevelt and Mr. Hull all felt that such hearings would be inadvisable. Dies therefore abandoned his plan but on February 28, 1942, after the Pearl Harbor disaster, he did publish a portion of the evidence.

The Dies committee has been persistent, impartial and successful and has become a great source of information for other agencies regarding anti-American activities. It has given absolutely no indication of being anti-Semitic and the charge that it is only the familiar and old reliable reaction of the Communists and fellow travelers in all such situations.

Mississippi Solves Its Financial Woes

They're a practical folk, the citizenry of Mississippi. And well do they know the history of the gallant heroes who wore the butternut gray.

They remember, for instance, the pragmatic philosophy of realistic Nathan Bedford Forrest. "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em."

Thus it is not more than passingly strange that the state house of representatives of legally dry Mississippi last week voted a 10 per cent tax on the sale of whisky.

It is just getting to the place where even a good, honest boot-legger can't make any money for taxes.

Mississippi bootleggers were already paying the state's 2 per cent sales tax on their product. And that, at today's prices, was a tidy sum. Comes now, however, this added 10 per cent. What one cannot but wonder, are the legislators trying to do ... state them out of business?

Mississippi's is a refreshingly ingenious approach to the war-aggravated problem of dwindling state revenues. While less imaginative administrations sit around bemoaning their lot and passing pessimistic communiques from barren vaults, Mississippi casts aside technicalities and, in search of more money, goes where more money is.

I would not be surprised any day now to read that Mississippi was issuing licenses for black markets, placing a 10 per cent levy on cheating and swindling, and enacting a stiff luxury tax on the practice of bigamy.

The time, indeed, may be shortly forthcoming when the state will accumulate a formidable surplus through the simple expedient of placing an amusement tax on lynchings.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Democrats for Willkie

Can Now Say So

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Tonight's announcement by Wendell L. Willkie that he is withdrawing from the Republican presidential contest was naturally a political sensation in his chances as made by seasoned observers in the face of the Wisconsin preferential primary results of yesterday, which saw him run last in a field of four contenders.

Even before the Willkie announcement came through late today, most political analysts of the capital had written him off as a presidential possibility on the Republican ticket. The Wisconsin results had been interpreted as that conclusive.

Predictions are now being freely made that Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, Mr. Willkie's undeclared but chief rival, will be nominated by the Republicans on the first ballot when the party's national convention meets at Chicago next June. Only the refusal of Dewey to run seems able to stop that.

While the Willkie withdrawal tended to leave his political future in doubt, there was a disposition on all sides here tonight to commend him for his quick and accurate appraisal of the Republican presidential situation as reflected in the Wisconsin primaries. He apparently did not try to minimize the effect of his defeat, but boldly and frankly stated that it was "obvious" he could not win and therefore he was removing himself from the race.

OTHER LESSER CONTENTENDERS By the same token, other lesser contenders might follow the same tack, but it is hardly to be expected that they will do so. It took someone of the Willkie straightforwardness to recognize the facts and act upon them promptly.

One immediate effect of the Willkie withdrawal is to give emphasis to the movement launched quietly in Democratic circles for having him named as a running mate to President Roosevelt in the coming November election on a national unity ticket.

A number of prominent Democratic leaders are known to have been giving serious consideration to a movement of the kind but have been holding back, awaiting the action of the Republican convention before projecting Mr. Willkie for the vice presidential nomination.

It has been anticipated by these Democratic leaders that the Republicans would turn down the party's 1940 nominee, and plans have been quietly laid for urging him for second place on the New Deal ticket, when and if that came about.

Now that Mr. Willkie has voluntarily eliminated himself from the Republican contest, the way seems to be wide open for efforts in his behalf as regards the Democratic ticket. Otherwise it would not have been possible to bring the movement into the open until after the Republican convention.

Sponsors of the Roosevelt-Willkie ticket argue that it would be a sure winner, particularly if it were linked with a commitment on the part of Mr. Roosevelt to resign after the war and the peace, thus allowing the Indiana man to serve out the remainder of his term. Seasoned heads in the Democratic party admit that such a ticket would be unbeatable. Mr. Willkie would be sure to bring with him the support of a considerable personal following he has built up in the Republican party, as well as a large number of conservative Democrats who have become disgruntled with the liberal policies of the New Deal. What happens in this connection, however, is a story to be developed more fully by future events.

CORRECTLY APPRAISED

Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, in commenting on Willkie action tonight, said that the 1940 GOP nominee had correctly appraised the Wisconsin primary results. "Mr. Willkie acted wisely in removing himself from the race," Senator George said. "There seemed no chance of his nomination after the results of yesterday. He also correctly appraised the Republican party as the party of negation, and a person of his dominant type of leadership could not very well expect to succeed again as the leader of the party." Senator George said that whether you agreed with Mr. Willkie or not, no one could dispute that he was a dominant character with ideas that are strongly at variance with the negative course the Republicans are now pursuing. "Mr. Willkie," he added, "is entirely correct in appraising the present course of his party as a course of negation."

It was not too surprising that Willkie

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

It Never Happened It was a fine story while it lasted, I mean, the story about Big Jim Farley having managed a team in the Hudson River League one time.

There was a great team at West Point in 1915 . . . the players of that season are all well-known generals now—and Jim Farley's team was supposed to have played them one day. And the story went that, needing another player, Farley recruited a semi-pro performer named Franklin D. Roosevelt. The same F. D. R. whom he later steered into the White House.

But the story about the game never happened. "I don't know where Bill Stern got hold of it. It never happened," Mr. Farley said. "I never managed any team in the Hudson River League and I didn't play against West Point. I was a semi-pro first baseman."

The story was told for fact by Stern. And then it was picked up by Clark Griffith, who used it as the basis for an inspired talk before the Cosmopolitan Club in Washington. It was printed in Washington and reprinted around the country. But there's not a word of truth in it.

It made a great story. But it's like a lot of wartime rumors. Not a word of truth—just something somebody heard from somebody's cousin Joe and told to someone else, and then it swept the country.

It pays to check the facts. If I hadn't seen Jim Farley I would have gone on thinking the story was true and given it even wider circulation. Of course, it's really an insignificant thing. But important things, in wartime, grow out of rumors.

The Unusual When Bob Jones, now a colonel in England, was making international golf history, he naturally played golf right-handed. No left-handed golfer has ever won the major championships. And yet when Bob Jones went hunting he was left-handed. He couldn't hit a bird on the wing right-handed. He swung the gun in a natural manner but he just couldn't connect.

It was very distracting and robbed him of much pleasure, so he determined to do something about it. After some study, Jones changed over. He began to shoot left-handed. He practiced on the exact ranges and soon became a fine shot.

The answer was that the master eye was the left. When he closed his left eye shooting right-handed, he was well off the target.

Now, here is an unusual thing . . . concerning Bob's dad. Big Bob Jones, back in Canton High school days, was regarded as the best baseball player on the team. Which one day prompted his father, who had other plans for him, to make a classic remark.

The Canton team was going away to play the Knoxville Reds and Bob Jones was not going to be allowed to make the trip. So the coach called up to plead with the father. In the course of the talk he told him that Bob Jones was the best player on the team. "Your son's a great baseball player," the coach continued, waxing enthusiastic.

But what I'm saying, Big Bob Jones batted left-handed. He threw a ball right-handed. But his natural swing was left-handed. Later on when he took up golf, however, he learned to play a very good game right-handed. It was natural with him.

There was the make-up of a champion in Big Bob. He simply was discouraged from playing major league baseball so that he could pursue an illustrious career in business.

Hitters Are Born Lewis Carpenter, the knuckle ball pitcher, is working out with the Crackers in off hours. (He works at night at Bell Bomber plant.) The former Georgia Tech athlete was recalling the first time he ever faced Murray Howell, who'll play the outfield—maybe all of it—for the Crackers nine this summer.

"Somehow Howell's name didn't come up when we went over the batters in the clubhouse meeting before the game. I was playing with Memphis and I went in to relieve that day. Howell was with Knoxville."

Howell came up and took his usual stance in the back of the batter's box. I took a second look. I didn't believe it. Why, anybody standing that far back would be a sucker for a low pitch outside—or, for that matter, any outside pitch. He just couldn't reach it, especially a curve.

"So I wound up and threw one low outside and he rattled the palms in right field."

"I understand a lot of pitchers who've never seen him before are fooled on the same thing. He murders outside pitching. He has terrific wrist and shoulder power. He sort of buggy whips the ball."

Howell has been hitting all kinds of pitching ever since he has been in organized baseball. He has been with Earl Mann before—back in 1931 at Hartford in the Eastern League. Hitters are born, not made, and Howell happens to be a hitter. No pitcher ever has been happy to see him come up in a clean-up role with the bases loaded.

I've been thinking right along, and especially since watching him dent the signs at Ponce de Leon the past few days, that someone has to be nominated to lead the Southern League hitting. And it may as well be Murray Howell.

He'll be a big help to the Crackers on offense.

One-Day Meet Looms in SEC BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 5.—(P)—C. W. Streit Jr., perennial referee of the Southeastern Conference track and field championships, said today the annual meet to be held here May 19-20 may be shifted to a one-day affair.

The decision will be made after the close of the entry list May 12. Should the field be so small as to do away with the necessity for holding trials, the meet will be conducted Saturday, May 20. Trials generally are held in six track and four field events on the opening day.

Louisiana State University beat out a favored Georgia Tech team in last year's championships.

Hornsby Resigns Vera Cruz Post MEXICO CITY, April 5.—(P)—Rogers Hornsby, former major league great who came to Mexico back in February amid reams of publicity, has resigned as manager of the Vera Cruz club in the Mexican Baseball League.

"The Rajah" announced his resignation last night, adding that he would return to Fort Worth, Texas, where he piloted that city's Texas League club in 1942 before the loop decided to quit for the duration.

"I'm perfectly willing to keep my own agreements if the other fellow keeps his," Hornsby said in explaining his action. "But in this case it's hopeless."

It was a fine story while it lasted, I mean, the story about Big Jim Farley having managed a team in the Hudson River League one time.

There was a great team at West Point in 1915 . . . the players of that season are all well-known generals now—and Jim Farley's team was supposed to have played them one day. And the story went that, needing another player, Farley recruited a semi-pro performer named Franklin D. Roosevelt. The same F. D. R. whom he later steered into the White House.

But the story about the game never happened. "I don't know where Bill Stern got hold of it. It never happened," Mr. Farley said. "I never managed any team in the Hudson River League and I didn't play against West Point. I was a semi-pro first baseman."

The story was told for fact by Stern. And then it was picked up by Clark Griffith, who used it as the basis for an inspired talk before the Cosmopolitan Club in Washington. It was printed in Washington and reprinted around the country. But there's not a word of truth in it.

It made a great story. But it's like a lot of wartime rumors. Not a word of truth—just something somebody heard from somebody's cousin Joe and told to someone else, and then it swept the country.

It pays to check the facts. If I hadn't seen Jim Farley I would have gone on thinking the story was true and given it even wider circulation. Of course, it's really an insignificant thing. But important things, in wartime, grow out of rumors.

The Unusual When Bob Jones, now a colonel in England, was making international golf history, he naturally played golf right-handed. No left-handed golfer has ever won the major championships. And yet when Bob Jones went hunting he was left-handed. He couldn't hit a bird on the wing right-handed. He swung the gun in a natural manner but he just couldn't connect.

It was very distracting and robbed him of much pleasure, so he determined to do something about it. After some study, Jones changed over. He began to shoot left-handed. He practiced on the exact ranges and soon became a fine shot.

The answer was that the master eye was the left. When he closed his left eye shooting right-handed, he was well off the target.

Now, here is an unusual thing . . . concerning Bob's dad. Big Bob Jones, back in Canton High school days, was regarded as the best baseball player on the team. Which one day prompted his father, who had other plans for him, to make a classic remark.

The Canton team was going away to play the Knoxville Reds and Bob Jones was not going to be allowed to make the trip. So the coach called up to plead with the father. In the course of the talk he told him that Bob Jones was the best player on the team. "Your son's a great baseball player," the coach continued, waxing enthusiastic.

But what I'm saying, Big Bob Jones batted left-handed. He threw a ball right-handed. But his natural swing was left-handed. Later on when he took up golf, however, he learned to play a very good game right-handed. It was natural with him.

There was the make-up of a champion in Big Bob. He simply was discouraged from playing major league baseball so that he could pursue an illustrious career in business.

Mauldin Available for Early Home Tilts

News Heartens Cracker Boss; Viers En Route

By JACK TROY

A new—and heartening—development with the Atlanta Crackers is the prospect of Marshall Mauldin, the best center fielder in the Southern League, being available for some of the early home games of the season.

Mauldin, on a new shift with the county police, is able to work with the squad now. He already has been accepted for general Army service but he doesn't expect a call before next month.

The Atlanta boy has entered the brick Cracker workouts enthusiastically and hopes to play in at least the opening two games against Knoxville. He would be signed only for home games.

Mauldin's appearance in the lineup might enable Manager Ki Ki Cuyler's entry to get away to a good start.

As the leading hitter of the Crackers last season, Marshall had an average of .333. He scored 82 runs and batted in 65 runs. Mauldin excelled at hitting doubles, with 27.

With both Mauldin and Murray Howell in the Cracker outfield at the start—and there still is a chance that Lindsay Deal will be here—the hitting strength of the team would be boosted considerably.

Most of the news nowadays is of an adverse nature. Hence the development that Mauldin might be available is something of a silver lining in the Cracker plans.

It was cold at Ponce de Leon Park yesterday but there was no abbreviation of the work. A long session of batting practice capped the day's activities.

Ray Viers, the classy Cracker second baseman, will report for his first workout Friday. He will arrive tonight from California.

It is expected that the first contingent of the Cuban players will check in with Ray Ovaros sometime today. Six, in all, are due to report.

Manager Cuyler is going to divide the squad for a six-inning game Friday. That was one of the reasons for the long session of batting practice yesterday. He was endeavoring to get the pitchers ready.

Anderson Shines For Birmingham BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 5.—(P)—Jodie Beeler, regular second baseman for the 1943 Birmingham Barons, checked in at Rickwood field today to bolster an already bright infield situation.

Glenn Rawlinson, local sandlotter who played considerable as a Barons regular last season, and Charlie Anderson, former University of Georgia star, have put in a strong bid at second, and indications are that Beeler will end up at third.

Nicholson May Not Play Baseball FRENCH LICK, Ind., April 5.—(P)—Bill Nicholson, Chicago Cubs outfielder who led the National League in runs-batted-in last year with 128, arrived in spring camp today but he may not play baseball for the duration and return to his Chesterton, Md., farm.

Nicholson, 28, married and the father of two sons, said he would make his decision "in a couple of days" and would work out with the club in the meantime.

Tucker Cagers Feted at Banquet The boys' and girls' basketball teams of Tucker High school were entertained at a banquet given by the school's Beta Club at the Candler hotel in Decatur Tuesday night. Seventy-five persons attended.

Claude Bond, Georgia Tech trainer, was principal speaker, and his talk proved interesting and witty to the players. W. M. Rainey, DeKalb county school superintendent, also rendered a short talk.

Cattle Growers To Meet Today

Cattlemen from seven southern states will meet at 11 a. m. today at the Henry Grady hotel to devise means of relieving cattle growers of difficulties arising from the war.

The meeting, called by committees of agriculture of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida and South Carolina, will try and devise some means of relieving cattle growers of a predicament they have been placed in by rulings set up by the WFA and OPA, according to J. Rex Jones, South Carolina's commissioner of agriculture.

The general purpose of the meeting will be to form a clearing house for information and better area representation. P. E. Williams, president of the Florida Cattlemen's Association, said.

Phone Workers Postpone Strike, Wait NLRB Rule

Proposed strike of the Southern Federation of Telephone Workers has been postponed pending an announcement within the next few days of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Phone Workers filed a petition with the NLRB last July asking for recognition of their organization as the bargaining agent. No decision has been rendered on the petition, and the proposed strike was voted because the decision had not been rendered.

Tire Inspection To Be Stopped

Periodic inspection of tires on passenger automobiles as has been required by the Office of Price Administration for the past 15 months will be discontinued after April 20, regional OPA officials announced.

"This does not mean that the tire picture has become any brighter. It simply means that the inspection program has fulfilled its primary objective—to make motorists conscious of the extreme need for tire conservation and care," James Armstrong, regional tire official, explained.

Tires on cars now in operation already have been examined at least three times since the inspection program was put into effect December 1, 1942, and has helped much in conservation of tires through early recapping and repairing, he said.

It is important that motorists retain their tire inspection records because OPA may continue the use of these records in the gasoline rationing program, it was pointed out.

Anita Colby, 'Cover Girl' Star, Is No Stranger to Atlantans

By LAMAR Q. BALL

Anita Colby, America's No. 1 Cover Girl, the stunning blonde with the Irish smile who spurred Atlanta's air raid wardens into record-breaking activity on the Fourth War Loan drive, will be back in Atlanta tomorrow, on the screen of the Rialto theater.

Men, women and children in north, south, east and west Atlanta met Miss Colby when she spent four days here during the sale of the bonds in that drive a few months ago.

They know her as a regular girl, who combines unusually impressive proportions of brains and beauty, and a ready Irish wit. At the Rialto theater, Miss Colby will be one of the featured players in "Cover Girl," a technical extravaganza starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly. It promises to be the outstanding film of the year among the musicals.

From Los Angeles, where she is resting after a tour of the country in which she helped other cities in their drives as she did Atlanta, Miss Colby sent word yesterday:

"I'm just on and off the screen a couple of times. Don't have my friends in Atlanta expecting to see me crowd Rita Hayworth out of her rightful spot as star. But tell my friends in Atlanta, I hope they see the picture—I know they'll like it."

IN TWO SCENES
In the picture Miss Colby appears in two scenes—one with Miss Hayworth and the other with Jinx Falkenburg. When the movie was produced, Columbia Pictures immediately sought the girl whose face has appeared on the covers of more magazines than have the faces of any other magazine lovelies in the nation.

Miss Colby had the reputation, the background, the solid qualities the film producers needed for an experienced Cover Girl who could gather up 15 of the prettiest in New York city and shepherd them to Hollywood for the long, hard job of screen appearances.

Miss Colby served as a technical director when the screen director wanted the girls to strut, Miss Colby had to take over and show the screen folk how the models really strut in their beauty-revealing jobs.

FATHER FAMOUS ARTIST
Anita Colby was born a Counihan. The Colby name was adopted for professional reasons. Her father, Bud Counihan, was one of the nation's leading newspaper comic strip artists, one of his creations having been "Betty Boop."

She grew up knowing newspaper men and their lingo came to her naturally. Because of this newspaper background in her family, she was selected by Columbia Pictures to act as "advance man" for the film. That job brought her to Atlanta in February, when she rolled up her mink sleeves and went to work helping the air raid wardens with their block-busting competition, sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution.

She still writes her old friends on The Constitution from all points of the country. Now, however, the promotion job is through and she is resting in Hollywood, where Columbia wants to discuss another picture with her.

Aside from her modeling job in New York, the Cover Girl has been in the editorial promotional and advertising departments of Harper's Bazar, for the last three years.

She has shown the skeptics that beauty can move along in step with brains.

Drop in and see her at the Rialto—you met her through The Constitution. And everyone who met her, liked her—she's a swell guy.
